

ABSTRACT

An orally deliverable pharmaceutical composition comprises a drug of low water solubility and a pregelatinized starch having low viscosity and/or exhibiting a multimodal particle size distribution. A process for preparing such a composition comprises a step of selecting a pregelatinized starch having low viscosity and/or exhibiting a multimodal particle size profile, and a step of admixing the selected pregelatinized starch with a drug of low water solubility.